Presenter: Since the beginning of the 21 century, the epoch of information and technology, the question of spreading fake information on the Internet has become vital, essential and controversial one. Today my guest is Laura Morenzo, an expert in cyber security and a professor of University of Barcelona. Ms. Morenzo is the character of the detective story "The victim of fake news" written by a famous author Arturo Perez-Reverte. He is Spanish and represents the literary movement called a detective fiction. Arturo Perez-Reverte lives in Cartagena. Since 2003 he has been a member of the Spanish Royal Academy. Professor Morenzo, spreading fake information on the Internet today is an immense problem for everyone because it can trigger different social, political and cultural consequences. One can say that spreading the so-called fake news in the cyber space has become a trend in the contemporary society. A number of experts all over the world agree that this situation must be controlled by both the governments and the international society in general. Today we see the new era of wars - information wars which are a part of hybrid wars. Do you think that the problem of spreading fake information is exaggerated or is it a real danger?

Professor: Unfortunately, I do believe that it is a real ~~det~~ danger and it is not exaggerated. In the book I am the expert who is helping to unravel the criminal case connected with the processes of computerization and globalization. Millions of people use the web every day, and they can find an immense amount of information there. The point is that sometimes it is ~~a~~ very difficult to understand where the truth is that is why the story is very complicated and full of ups and downs of the detectives in charge of this case.

Presenter: But why is there so much fake information on the Internet and who is to blame?

Professor: It can be easily explained. There are a lot of reasons and the first one is that the Internet gives you an opportunity to be anonymous. Moreover, people can share information for free. And the last but not the least - the control over the Internet leaves much to be desired. The international society hasn't managed to establish a single law which deals with cyber space security yet. Information rules the world. It is an open ~~secret~~ secret that the mass media play a vital role nowadays. All we know about the CNN effect. However, it is worth mentioning that the mass media are responsible for what they print in the conventional sources of information or publish on the Internet and ordinary people are not. As an expert in this realm I do my best to change the situation.
