- 1.- True. By technicality, all words ^A can be interpreted as symbols, which makes language full of them.
- 2.- True. The most common way of representing symbols is also the way that portrays their meaning in the simplest way.
- 3.- False. Symbolism as a way of expressing thought grants us the ability to do so easily and quickly, obviously making it short.
- 4.- False. On the contrary, simple symbols are the most prominent of their kind.
- 5.- Not Stated
- 6.- Not Stated
- 7.- True. The more a student indulges in literature, the easier it will be for them to express whatever they desire and, by correlation, use symbolisms.
- 8.- False. While students should not shy away from using symbols, the use of unique ones may lead the message they try to convey to be inconclusive, or easily misunderstood.

Imagination and creativity have always been essential for human life and greatly influence fields of study like literature. For example, Tolkien wrote his "Lord of the Rings" series initially as kids' bedtime stories. But is literature the only sphere, where creativity has an influence?

Another example can be the creativity required for almost any profession. The best age at which to develop creativity is childhood.

Overall, imaginative and creative children's ambitions may go a long way if their creativity is used for good.

Spotty, the white dog is a "curious little fella", as his owners say. Not caring to pronounce the word "fellow" correctly, they call him that, because he is constantly trying to discover something new. Today was no different.

As Spotty was walking around the house, thinking of what to do, his keen doggy senses picked up on a peculiar smell. He traced the fragrance back to a box by the back door of the Browns' family estate, where Spotty lived. He walked up to the box, sniffed it again and casually lifted the lid with his snout. What happened next startled Spotty. He thought to himself: "Am I in a hurricane?" - But didn't have time to find an answer, as a scream from behind sent him bolting in the opposite direction. What had happened was, that, having opened the box, Spotty had unleashed a wave of live frogs unto his owner, Mrs. Brown, a formidable woman, who always wore a white apron and carried a broom. Mrs. Brown, however, wasn't startled for too long.

In just a couple seconds she sweeps up the frogs and puts them back in the box. She starts searching for her husband, Mr. Brown, whom she catches with a fishing rod in his hands. She stops to plan ahead: "If this is his doing, then he should be punished." - But, seeing his clothes, she reconsiders: "If I start hitting with the broom, his black vest and pants would be stained, and his white collared shirt would be ruined". Finally making up her mind, she says: "I know, I'll just hit him on the head, then he won't know what hit him". Having thought that, she misses stands around the corner, waiting for the right opportunity to punish the saboteur. Neither he, nor Spotty ~~will~~ know what happened until it's all over.

Imagination ^{and creativity} has always been an essential part of society's livelihood and ~~creativity has always been there with it. But why should these human traits influence~~ ~~life in general? developed in children and young people in general.~~

~~For example, Tolkien, who was very creative as a child, only ~~first~~ wrote his Lord of the Rings series as bedtime stories for his kids. But is literature the only sphere, where creativity has an influence?~~

Another example can be the creativity required to be a successful engineer. The best time to develop the imagination of a person is when they are young.

Overall, imaginative and creative children, though not a rare sight, may go a long way if their creativity is used for a good cause.

He thought to himself: "What is that noise?" - But he didn't have time to find out, as the scream of a formidable woman, named Mrs. Brown, sent Spotty bolting in the opposite direction.

What had happened, was that Spotty had opened a box of frogs, which got scared of Spotty and started jumping away in ~~any~~ ^{every} direction. Mrs. Brown saw this and got really scared. But she quickly gets herself together and, disposing of the frogs, goes searching for Mr. Brown, her husband. When she sees him, she stops to plan ahead: "If this is his doing, when he should be punished. I'll walk up to him and will start beating him with the broom! Oh, but his new black vest and white collared shirt, I won't be happy to ruin these. I know! I'll just hit him on the head!" - But where's Spotty? Won't he be confused? All the misses has to do now is wait for the opportunity.
