Reading

1. The personality of an average teenager has changed a lot after the World War Two. For example, teenagers were allowed to convey their ideas to the society and have their own view on different topics

2. The concept of a teenager is exploited by the marketing people because teenagers have the same influence on the market as adults. They can set trends and affect the reputation and image of companies.

3. Both texts focus on similar aspects of adolescence as the first text contains information about the capabilities of teenagers and the second text shows exact examples of young people's influence on science and society.

4. Statement: Own wishes and values of teenagers are listened to more.
I agree with this statement. Nowadays, teenagers have their own interests and opinion. For example, there are a lot of competitions which are organised to let teenagers promote their ideas and even get money for bringing them up to life.

5. I suppose that the examples in the second text are really inspirational because they give motivation to teenagers to work hard to achieve the same influence and social status. Moreover, these examples show that young people are also able to change the world for the better.

1. What museums and galleries to visit and what to see there?
The Buckingham Palace is really worth visiting because its building hasn't been changed from 1914 and we'll have the chance to see its interiors. The Westminster Abbey is also a nice venue because it was built for the Parliament, but in fact it is not used by it, so it's a museum.
2. What historical landmarks to visit and what historical period to learn about?
I believe that the London eye (the world's largest observation wheel) is one of the main landmarks we should visit to enjoy a view and learn information about building of this wheel. Moreover, in the Tower of London we'll be able to learn about the royal dynasties of Britain, ~~here~~ and hear some stories about Henry VIII. I also suggest to visit the Baker street where Sherlock Holmes used to live and acquire some information ~~from~~ about the history of this place.
3. What concert halls to attend and what to do there?
We can go to the West End which is close to Manchester and choose any theatre and concert hall we would like to visit - there are plenty of them in West End.
4. What transport to use to conveniently reach mentioned places?
We can use the Tube (which means underground) or take a city London bus to enjoy a city tour.
5. Where to eat out and what to try?
It's a good idea to find a cafe in the centre of London and have afternoon tea - it is a meal from 3 p.m. to 5 p.m. Moreover, we can try the English breakfast as well. The London cafe "Idol" is also a perfect place to have a meal in.

Dear editor,

In your article you've written about the problems caused by usage of plastic. I was really touched by this text and decided to write to you. In my opinion, plastic waste is a threat to our society and people should be concerned about this problem more.

As you've written in your article, there used to be two million tonnes of plastic in 1950 and 380 million tonnes in 2015. If the tendency continues, we will have 500 million tonnes of it in a decade and it will be extremely hard to save our planet from plastic waste.

What is more, as the world without plastic is unrealistic, people can't stop using it immediately and there are no other materials to substitute plastic. For example, if people understand that they can't produce more plastic because of the pollution and waste of it, nothing will improve the situation. All these reasons prove that people should start doing something to solve the problem right now. I have some ideas of what should be done to change the situation for the better.

To start with, more recycling bins for plastic should be installed in megapolises. There are some of them in cities, but not enough, so people are too lazy to reach them.

Moreover, more attention to replacing plastic should be paid. Scientists should accelerate the process of creating new eco-friendly materials and citizens should use less plastic. For example, it's better to buy a bottle than to use plastic cups and use paper packaging instead of plastic one.

~~All in all, waste of plastic is a serious problem.~~

Yours sincerely,

Mike Gorodnitskiy

All in all, waste of plastic is a serious problem that has to be fundamentally solved. If the necessary attention is paid to this issue, the situation will improve rapidly.

Your sincerely,
Mike Gorodnitskiy
