1. The personality of an average post-WWII Western teenager has altered significantly as he/she realised the prospects of contributing time and sources to his/her self-development ~~rather than~~ and relishing things that he/she wanted rather than belonging to parents and doing what they wanted and said.

2. The concept of teenager is exploited by marketing people because ^{and can translate it to people,} it is thought that teenagers easily catch on modern tendencies and trends ^{and can translate it to people,} ~~and~~ provided that they can be effectively ~~the~~ involved in marketing process bringing most out of it.

3. Text 1 and Text 2 ~~don't~~ ^{do} focus on similar aspects of adolescence because Text 1 elaborates on the evolution of ~~teenager~~ ^{young persons' mindset} through time and comments on ~~the way of the world~~ ^{where 'newly established} personality' of the teenager was mostly needed and used, ~~and~~ ^{and} Text 2 provides readers with real instances of famous people who succeeded in what they did ~~thanks~~ in adolescence thanks to their creative traits of character.

4. Text 1: Adolescents should preserve to their own wishes nowadays to become successful ~~in order to~~.

I ^{entirely} agree with it as now it is crucial to do what you really want in order to thrive and relish your life hence becoming successful and prosperous. Where is the will, there is the way.

Text 2: It is possible to become prosperous and famous while being an adolescent.

I ~~partially~~ mostly agree with this statement as the world is ~~our~~ ^{ever} our own oyster and is full of opportunities ~~and~~ BUT at the same time despite being extremely ambitious young person can fail to become successful because of ^{simply} ~~not~~ ^{simply} being lucky enough.

5. I find the examples in Text 1 inspirational because they motivate me to work hard. ~~Even~~ If someone is able to do it then there is a chance for me to do so and I feel certain to try it out.

TO VISIT OR NOT TO VISIT? THAT IS THE QUESTION

London is one of the most celebrated places ~~too~~ of mass attraction in the world, ~~many~~ millions of tourists embark on tantalisingly interesting tours around it daily, ~~and~~ it's not surprising because there are dozens of places that worth our attention and time. ① Big Ben, Westminster Abbey including Houses of Parliament, Shakespeare, royal family and monarchy - it's all about London. Speaking about museums and galleries one should visit while being in the heart of Great Britain, I can certainly outline the Tower of London, established in 1066 by William the Conqueror, where we can relish the sight of royal jewels, namely the Crown, and embrace ourselves with the zeitgeist of the 11th century. Besides, the Buckingham Palace, the residence of royal family firstly inhabited by Queen Victoria, will be a perfect place to visit. ~~Other monarchs, predecessors of Queen Victoria, also had their edifices where they lived most of the time. For instance, Henry VIII resided in Hampton Court which we can also visit to relish the grandeur and atmosphere of the 16th century.~~ ② Among famous theatres of London, the Globe can be defined as the most authentic as there we can watch "Hamlet", "Much ado about nothing", whatever suits your ^{style and} mood. ③ To commute around the city we can use The Tube, the underground system of London, with the help of which we can reach all mentioned-above destinations ^{even} and travel to the West End, however, if you feel certain to catch a glimpse of London's architecture you can embark on red double-deckers. ④ Baker Street will be an impeccable place to savour some traditional food such as Toad in the Hole or have a cup of a ^{famous} "Afternoon Tea". To finish our trip I would highly recommend you to have ride on ^{The} London Eye to make an overall impression of the city and ^{conjure up} recap all your memories, accumulated from travelling, as the height of the wheel will enable you to see the entire city.

Dear editor,

Nowadays plastic became the staple of quotidian life as people use it daily and cannot simply imagine their lives without it. It can be found literally everywhere: from a supermarket ^{shelf} to the bottom of the ocean. The problem is that most of the time people do not care about impact it has and will have on their lives in the future. The intention of this letter is to ^{respond to the points raised in the article that} ~~outline~~ an alarmingly crucial issue to solve - excessive usage of plastic ~~in~~ everyday life. I personally cannot ignore such problem and think that we need to take action now to avoid atrocious repercussions in the future.

Speaking about the implications plastic has already inflicted, it must be mentioned that microplastics have been found in the bodies of animals that live in the deepest ocean trenches and in drinking water around the globe, the one that we consume daily. In other words, plastic has an invidious effect on our bodies and it is ubiquitous as it was found in the bodies of animals that seem to live in the areas that cannot be approached most of the times even by people.

Another point to consider is that plastic production grows exponentially. For instance, it has increased from 2 billion tonnes in 1950 to 380 million tonnes in 2015. Consequently, if people keep using plastic at this rate, scientists ^{estimate} ~~predict~~ that ~~plastic~~ plastic will account for 20% of oil production by 2050.

Notwithstanding, I have several solutions to enhance the situation. Recycling seems to be the best possible thing to do but ~~perhaps~~ it was suggested myriads of times and no further improvements were seen. That is why I think it will be more relevant to propose new ~~idea~~ "recycling law" and impose sanctions on people who will not abide by it. Besides, for adolescents "go green classes" will be also beneficial as they may generate their interest in Caring about the ^{planet and own} ~~planet~~ future and will eventually develop in them some sort of habit to use plastic ~~less~~ less frequently.

To sum up, plastic usage is inevitable in our lives because we have already adapted our lives to ^{using} it. Nevertheless, I think that there is always time to change and ~~to~~ the fact that the future of ^{our} ~~our~~ next generations firmly ~~depends~~ depends on it, ^{we may stimulate us to do so} we need to act now before it is too late.

Sincerely,
Best regards,

Your faithful reader

3. No, because Text 1 elaborates on the evolution of teenager's fate and comments on the origin of the word 'teenager' itself while Text 2 provides ~~read~~ ^{read} with instances of successful adolescents ^{who succeeded in becoming rich by young} ~~who were able to achieve it~~.

4. Text 1:

Adolescents should pursue to their own wishes nowadays than be committed to their parents.

I do not agree with this statement ^{in the 21st} as ^{now it's crucial} to do what you really want, in the individualist society it's much more important to work for yourself and not to do what someone wants from you.

It's possible to become ^{prosperous} rich and famous while being an adolescent.

I definitely agree upon this statement because many lucky things can occur nowadays no matter how old you are. So, the only thing one can do is just to seize the opportunity and use it properly.
