Britain had been conquered several times, but the Roman Empire must've affected the British traditions most. There's a saying - all roads lead to Rome. Indeed, the Romans left behind straight roads and strong houses. Culture experienced changes, too. The public started dressing in Roman clothes. Amenities, such as theatres and baths, were adopted. In religion, Christianity was spread. The language changed with the dissemination of Latin.

1. Great Barrier Reef

It is a site of

The Great Barrier Reef is home to many species of sea creatures that are on the verge of extinction and we must protect them and their habitat.

2. Historic District of Old Québec

This place was founded by

This historic part of Québec is important to preserve as an example of 17th century architecture and a fortified colonial city, unique to the region of North America.

3. Yellowstone National Park

The vast natural site covers

The site must be protected, as it contains half of all the world's geothermal features, meaning it's a one of a kind wonder of nature and it must not be ruined.

4. Palace of Westminster and Westminster Abbey

The structure, rebuilt from the

This place holds enormous historical and cultural value, so we must preserve it for future generations to see and connect with history.

5. Sydney Opera House

Inaugurated in 1973, the site

construction of this building had a lasting influence on architecture and for many even symbolizes Australia! So, it would be wrong to wish to replace it, instead, it must always be kept a national treasure.

1. In the modern world, not only peoples' perception, but means of discovering culture have changed. Museums, for example, have been made virtual, so now it isn't required to actually visit the place to see the artefacts. Because of this, museums now mostly play the role of archives.

2. These changes, however, do not mean that the interest or demand for culture has decreased. An educated person still feels the need to discover treasures of ones own country and on an international level. Sadly, I have noticed that children and teenagers are visiting museums more rarely, which results in them only knowing the names of the main ones of the country. I blame that on the spread of electronic devices that minimise the need to go and see the exhibitions in person.

1. People need to do something to make more teenagers interested in going to museums. I think that the "Ancient Greece and spend a night at the British Museum in London" experience is a great way to attract young visitors. This is because modern teenagers enjoy doing things out of the ordinary, so a night out at the museum seems like the perfect idea!

2. Looking at the timetable, the organisation seems practical in the sense there is a group leader and you get to choose your sleeping spot. The programme is filled with a great variety of activities, so I think it would suit everyone's interests and personalities.

Essay

- FORMAL STYLE

I. In the modern world not only has the way people view culture changed, but also the means of discovering museums, for example, have been made virtual, so now it isn't required to actually visit the place to see the artifacts. ^{Because of this} Now, real museums play more of a role of archives.

These changes, however, do not mean that the interest or demand for culture has decreased. An educated person feels the need to discover the treasure's of one's own country and on an international level.

Sadly, I have noticed that children and teenagers are visiting museums more rarely which results in them only knowing the names of the main museums of the country.

I blame that on the spread of electronic devices that minimise the need to go and see the real thing in person.

Analysis

People need to do something to make more ~~children~~ ^{teenagers} interested in going to museums. I think that the Ancient Greece experience is a great way to attract visitors. This is because modern teenagers enjoy ~~spending time with their friends~~ ^{doing things on their own} and a night out at the museum is a fabulous idea.
