The Roman Empire had a massive role in the progress of the British islands. The Britons changed their religion and became christian. The Romans influenced the Britons to start reading and writing in latin. The Romans also built houses, theatres and bars for the Britons. The Romans even united the Britons from many groups into one and started calling them Britons.

Museums make up a great part of modern worldwide culture. Nowadays ~~even~~ there are even online exhibitions, where people can explore museums without leaving the comfort of their homes. Cultural museums can help us find out about cultures and traditions outside of our country, which is very important for us to understand other nationalities and respect them.

I think that this kind of activity wouldn't be the best fit for my age group, as I am already sixteen, however, I think that for a younger age group, this experience would be very interesting and fun. In my opinion, the fact that your parents have to look after you is a bit strange for kids older than twelve. Also I would find that learning about Ancient Greece would be more interesting to do alone, with a film or a book. The sleepover, however, is planned pretty well. I like how it starts in the evening and ends in the morning, but I do have a few problems with the organization. I'm confused on when the children are supposed to have dinner, seeing that the fun starts at six, which is quite early, but the only allocated time for food is at nine. Even then it says 'snack break' and not 'dinner'. I also do not understand why Sunday morning starts so early, waking up at seven is rather early.

I am suggesting my own museum sleepover! At Oxford's Story Museum sleepovers, your teenager will experience one of the best nights of ~~their~~<sup>their</sup> lives. They will feel like they are in a story and will use their critical thinking skills. They will even write their own stories!
