However, I've been never actually keen on fast food, but since I've got a lot of study assignments, eating fast food is a great opportunity to save time for studying.

As a native Georgian, I'd like to recommend a dish called khachapuri. It includes nothing sophisticated - simply, it's just soft dough and water. It's actually very delicious.

Part 5.

Челмоуш

Firstly, in the very beginning of my text, I'd like to say that having your own room is very important (don't think I'm selfish, I'm just the only child in the family) because your room (and your home at all) is a place that holds your and your family's memories and where you can feel fully comfortable. It's hard to define what what an ideal room is, and everyone has their own opinion about this as I reckon. However, I don't dream of any kind of a "perfect place", I just need some space where I feel happy, and thankfully I've got one. But if I have to think of a room that is better than the room I've got at the moment, let me imagine one.

The shape and the size of the room don't really matter to me (at least they shouldn't be really extraordinary). I'd prefer some cold and light colours that can calm me when I'm frustrated or disappointed, for instance, light blue, grey, white etc. Also, I'd like to get walls ~~covered with~~ painted and floors covered with wood because I don't like wallpaper (at least ~~it~~ because it's hard to find good ones) and floor coverings that aren't made with natural materials.

As a piano playing and composing (and music at all) major, I'd certainly need a grand piano. ~~But~~ Buying one is a dream for me, but unfortunately I can't afford it. Also, I'd like to get a large library and a good computer, ~~not~~ because I often need to search unusual information for my assignment^{исслюк}.

 I don't need all the other items that are depicted in the task: I haven't got such a big amount of clothes that I'd need a large wardrobe; I don't need a canopy nor a bunk bed but a simple one; I don't need rugs, basketball hoops, football soccer tables, decorations depicted etc. It doesn't matter how they'll be located (at least, a grand piano should stand in the middle of the room).

In the end, I'd like to say that it makes no sense if you've got a richly decorated or a ~~poor~~^{simple} room - memories connected with the place are the only things that can make you feel comfortable in it.
 That's the way I reckon.
