① Listening.

A. evolution

2. thousands

3. Enlightenment

4. novel

5. exclusively.

B. Both texts focus on misconceptions that people had in general had about the evolution and the way each perception started to shift. However, while the lecture describes people mistaking by not accepting the process of evolution, the article shows a simple perception of the concept that is not comprehensive and, therefore, wrong. All things considered, scientific ideas should be approached from different sides to be fully understood.

② Reading.

A. Grammar helps people to understand not only what we say, but also who we are. This way, grammar can show if one is speaking informally or is speaking formally.

B. Substandard grammar in ^{the second} text creates the image of an informal situation. The language structure (he ain't, where he come) shows that the character is being informal while probably having a row with someone: in a rush, the mistakes are made. The language in the third text ("lauffing", "that") makes the character appear illiterate and, thereby, not well-educated. Even though Algernon is an adult, his language makes him look like a child.

C. 2) - Do not call to meddle with me.
- let him say what he likes. I don't want to have any truck with him.
- Yes! He tell him where he comes from if you want to go fortune-telling.

④ A few facts show that it is not possible that the speech was delivered by ~~the said person~~ Elizabeth I. Firstly, the British parliament (which "the House" refers to), had not been established during the Queen's reign yet. Secondly, "photography" ~~hadn't~~ had not been invented in the 16th century either. Thirdly, Nelson's day is mentioned. Admiral Nelson acted heroically during the Napoleonic Wars, ^{which} ~~that~~ took place ^{some some} centuries after Elizabeth I ~~she~~ had died. Therefore, the speech was probably delivered by George II.

⑤ Ladies and gentlemen, please take a look at the watch I'm holding. It's 5PM, June, 25, 2025. 11 years ago, many of us were scared, full of apprehension before our first ~~school~~ school year. But here we are, standing at the end of this path. Time flies so fast, right? I know that you wonder how something that lies ahead looks like. Bright? Happy? Prosperous? Spoiler alert: all of that, actually. But before taking a step forward, let's reflect on the path stretching behind us, so long and yet so meaningful.

Well, I know that that one mistake, ~~that one~~ sleepless night or awkward situation may pop up ~~right now~~ in your mind. That road was really bumpy ~~at times~~ sometimes, wasn't it? Something I want you to know is that we were all shaped by every little experience we had. No matter how hard it was, I see you all standing here boldly. It turns out ~~that~~ that ^{every} obstacle we faced was actually a ~~a~~ stepping stone. Let's take a moment to appreciate the hard work you've done!

For sure, we all developed academically. But I think that personal development is something worth honouring as well. ~~All of this thanks to the community: our teachers, families and school friends.~~ I am sure that the community ~~has~~ helped us a lot ^{to become who we are} to get so much experience and make the road less bumpy. Dear teachers, classmates, and families, thank you for ~~always~~ your support, thank you for giving us happy memories. I think that there's ~~this~~ one person who we forget to say "thank you" to.

«метовик 3.

 Ourselves. I want you all to ~~take a moment~~ feel the gratitude spreading through your heart. Let this light in!

And now let's return to the road that ~~lies~~ lies ahead. I'm not going to lie: ~~that~~ it really scares me.
 But, you know, something I learned is that the fear can be easily transformed into curiosity. Instead of "I can't handle this! The unknown is ~~scary~~ terrifying!" we can think to ourselves: "I wonder what the future holds!
 What are these situations, places and people that will help me grow?" Mindset is everything! ~~please, don't~~
 Dear graduates, never stop shooting for the stars.
 Let's dance into the unknown together and live a life full of light. Thanks a lot!
