A.

1. evolution
2. thousands
3. enlightenment
4. novel
5. ~~exquisitely~~ exquisitely

B. — Both texts provided highlight the misconceptions regarding the evolutionary processes. However, the article focuses primarily on proving that evolutionary biology is, in fact, a science. The lecture is centered around various perceptions of life origin and the history of the key theory. These materials prove that the evolutionary theory remains to be a fundamental concept and it should be implemented into education more, as misconceptions about it are not uncommon.

A. The extracts show how ^{using grammar differently} ~~different usage of grammar~~ can affect the understanding of the idea that is expressed. Proper grammar delivers the train of thought clearly, whereas grammatical mistakes fog up the meaning of the sentence.

B. By analyzing the grammar used by characters in extract 2 we can assume that they are people of a specific race. For instance, it is common for people of African-American origin to use "ain't", and add "wa" after pronouns such as "you" and "we". The character in extract 3 comes off as naive and childish due to the grammar mistakes. ~~to~~ Those can be related to the lack of education received by the character or their young age.

C. — But I don't have sixty pounds.

— One would think you were my father.

— Here! You give me that handkerchief. He gave it to me, not to you.

B. I hope I have luck. I got my rabbit's foot and my lucky penny and my horseshoe. Dr. Strauss said, "Don't be so superstitious, Charlie". This is science. I don't know what science is but they all keep saying it so maybe it's something that helps you have good luck. Anyway, I'm keeping my rabbit's foot in one hand and my lucky penny in the other hand with the hole in it. The penny, I mean.

Horatio Nelson.

It is not possible that this speech was delivered by the 44th president of the US, Barack Obama. There are several facts that prove this assumption. First of all, the events described here ~~are~~ did not happen in the United States. That is indicated by the mentioning of "His Majesty's Government" and the fact that the speaker refers to the land as "our Island home". It is clear that this speech ~~was~~ is attributed to a representative of The United ~~Kingdom~~ ^{UK}. Moreover, the timelines are incorrect, since the language specifics of this text show that this is not exactly modern English. That is shown by the recurring usage of the word "shall".

Good day, dear teachers, fellow students and their families. Standing in front of you today, I cannot help but feel honored. I'll try to make this as meaningful and memorable as possible, but also short, since I really don't need you to see me cry from up here.

How difficult is it going to be to walk out of this building knowing it's the last time? All those years we spent together, the laughter that the school walls have soaked up. Remember that big fight in the cafeteria over the only donut left when we were freshmen? Yes, teachers, that definitely didn't happen! It's with the greatest joy that I say that those are the years I will be looking back at with happiness. That's not to say that my time in school was all rainbow and sunshine. →

I've overcome many ^{существ} obstacles, which may or may not have led me to cry in the bathroom stalls a couple of times. I've grown spiritually, emotionally and intellectually, all thanks to the support from you, dear classmates, and our respected teachers. None of my academic goals could ever be reached without the school letting me explore my interests and delve into subjects that excite me. I cannot stress the input my ~~to~~ family had in my education enough. Thank you, mom and dad, for letting me be myself.

Leaving this school puts a lot of responsibilities on our shoulder. I know how terrifying that can be, but it's essential to not get caught up in those feelings and to remember our past experiences that shaped us into who we are today. My favourite singer-songwriter, Taylor Swift, said something that speaks volumes, "The scary thing is - you're on your own now. But the good thing is - you're on your own now!" This world has a lot to offer, but you also have a lot to give. Be open-minded, let the opportunities find you. You have no reason to be afraid!
